Notes:

All the memorials that we supply are made from natural quarried materials. They are therefore subject to natural markings and slight colour variations, and are sold subject to this.

We do, however, select very carefully and guarantee that any such markings are not detrimental to the quality or durability of the memorial.

The following details give a brief description of materials used:

GRANITE

Granite is quarried worldwide and available in a variety of colours. A small sample of which is:

Black – A dense ebony black granite with very fine grain.

Emerald Pearl – Iridescent dark green crystals with black flecks.

Ruby Red Granite – Red & brownish, black & bluish-grey specks, evenly distributed.

Karin Grey – A classic granite in light grey with darker grey speckles.

Tropical Green – A multicolour rich dark green with sweeping movement.

Cornish – Our local granite. Coarse grained silver grey granite, hard & extremely durable.

Dark Grey – A very dark grey granite with slightly lighter silver grey grain.

CARRARA MARBLE

The traditional white-greyish memorial marble with irregular grey veining. Quarried in Italy.

PORTLAND

An oolitic limestone, fine grain, light buff colour, the traditional material used in memorials for generations. Carves well. One of our local materials from the island of Portland.

PURBECK

An oolitic mottled grey/brown limestone, full of fossil shell, a material that differs from block to block in colour and texture. Local material from the island of Purbeck.

We wish to advise that the supply of Purbeck Stone, can take longer then 8-12 weeks. This is due to a shortage of material. Please allow longer for the preparation of the material.

NABRESINA

A fossilised limestone, used extensively as an alternative to marble for churchyards, light fawn colour with profuse small shell markings, occasional pink blush markings. Carves well.

Many other materials are quarried and available. If you require a particular material not mentioned above or within our brochure, please contact us and we will be glad to advise you on its suitability and availability.

We take great pride in our craft, producing memorials of everlasting beauty and artistic achievement.
